

New Session of the Legislature... questions abound

Monday, October 6 marks the start of a new session of the Legislature. This is an opportunity to finally hold the government to account over what has happened in the last four months.

Questions about the Mount Polley Mining disaster, the unexplained firing of health care workers from the Ministry of Health and the LNG fantasies of the BC Liberal Government.

Last year the Premier gave away a strong bargaining position when she promised total debt elimination, an imagined fund of billions of dollars and 100,000 jobs when LNG plants are up and running starting in 2015. That sent a clear message to potential investors that the BC Liberal Government would be desperate for a deal, putting British Columbia in a weaker bargaining position and threatening our ability to ensure a fair return for British Columbians.

I have outlined the four guiding principles necessary for responsible LNG development:

- That projects expressly guarantee jobs and training opportunities for British Columbians.
  - That British Columbians receive a fair return for the resource that belongs to them.
  - That government respects and makes partners of First Nations and recognizes their right to a share of any benefits that flow from the resource.
  - That our air, land and water be protected, and that our resource development be as clean as possible.
- LNG development must be about building communities – not camps. It must be about returning a benefit to all British Columbians.

Finally, October 1 was National Senior's Day. It was a day to recognize how much seniors contribute to our economy and to our communities. Many seniors in Juan de Fuca, and across the province, have told me that they are stressed over the financial strains that are making it difficult to live with limited incomes when there are rate hikes on ferries, burgeoning hydro bills and increasing MSP Premiums. I will continue to press the government on these issues and to stand up as your voice in the legislature.

Mount Polley disaster

BC'S ENVIRONMENT has been in the spotlight with the Mount Polley tailing pond collapse this summer. In my role as Leader of the Official Opposition I went straight to the site of the disaster and spent three days seeing firsthand the destruction and devastation. I met with people whose lives will be impacted for an unknown period of time, some likely forever. The consequences of the breach on people, wildlife, water and the aquatic environment will be felt for decades.

The BC Liberal government response to this environmental calamity has been infuriating. They have been slow in releasing even the most basic information such as the mine permit. They are undermining the public's trust in our resource development. Responsible resource development needs to be a priority for BC. We all know that permitting industrial activity has an environmental impact that needs to be balanced against the economic benefits locally, regionally and provincially. This incident demonstrates how critical that balance is and what happens when you get it wrong. I will continue to press for answers on what really happened, how we can ensure it never happens again and for accountability from the government.
